The Latin alphabet used in Serbian is similar to the English alphabet, but it includes several additional letters formed by adding diacritical marks, such as Č, Ć, Š, Ž, and Đ. These characters are vital for proper pronunciation and are not interchangeable. Serbian Latin is often seen in modern media, user interfaces, and digital communication. Learning Serbian Latin is a great first step for beginners, especially if you're already familiar with the Latin script. However, make sure not to overlook the unique letters and their specific pronunciations. In this lesson, you'll learn each letter and sound, how it maps to the Cyrillic alphabet, and how to read and write Serbian accurately.
