Serbian Alphabet - Cyrillic

The Serbian Cyrillic alphabet is one of two alphabets used in the Serbian language, the other being Latin. It consists of 30 letters, each representing a single sound, which makes it a phonetic and consistent writing system. Understanding the Cyrillic alphabet is essential for reading signs, menus, and documents across Serbia and regions where it is used. The alphabet includes unique letters such as Љ, Њ, and Ћ that represent specific Serbian sounds. When learning Cyrillic, it's important to remember that some letters may look familiar to Latin letters but represent different sounds. For example, the Cyrillic "В" sounds like "V", not "B". With practice and repetition, you'll be able to associate each letter with its correct sound, allowing you to read and pronounce Serbian words confidently. This lesson will guide you through each letter, along with pronunciation tips and examples.
